

“Crop Circles embody something deeply personal for me and that is that potential for personal transformation. People talk about messages, codes, information, languages, but to me the crop circles have always seemed beyond those very ‘human’ concepts. They speak directly to the heart, spirit or soul, often bypassing the intellect (in its current form). In our rational/mental age we look for the rational, intellectual, and the logical, but I think in the crop circles we have something that calls us beyond that, something that calls for us to develop an intelligence of the heart, soul or psyche. My overwhelming sense is of something that is timeless, non-linear and that has no one firm interpretation. The crop circles seem to be able to speak to each one of us in an individual way, but collectively they address consciousness itself and call us forward to a new perception of ourselves and our place in the world. “
